

Adjunct Professor/Science Education Scholar

Georgetown University, Washington DC

APPLICATION DEADLINE: October 2nd, 2009

Georgetown University is seeking a Science Education Scholar, an adjunct professor position in its Program on Science in the Public Interest (SPI).

Candidates must have a PhD in science and experience in informal science education or K-12 teaching. The primary responsibility of the Scholar will be expanding the GU collaboration with the National Museum of American History Spark!Lab

(<http://invention.smithsonian.org/centerpieces/sparklab/index.html>), including working with GU students to evaluate and develop new hand-on activities, and working toward linking Spark!lab activities with DC Public Schools.

Interested applicants should submit a resume and cover letter by October 2nd, 2009, to:

Dr. Francis Slakey

Co-Director, SPI

slakeyf@georgetown.edu

All current SPI Scholars also hold positions in the government or NGOs. For a list, see:

<http://spi.georgetown.edu/people.html>